To whom it may concern:

I am writing to recommend Marian Díaz Romero without reservation. Marian has been part of our technology architecture team for the past fifteen months as a Tech Advisory professional. Her move to Australia is a genuine loss for us, and I am glad to support her for any organisation fortunate enough to bring her on board.

During her time with us, Marian worked across two technically demanding areas: the development of digital twin platforms and the architecture of agentic systems. In the latter she stood out in particular: she built the agent framework from the ground up that now underpins the technology advisory work for a banking-sector client — a domain where rigour and reliability are non-negotiable.

What I value most about Marian is her autonomy and reliability. She is the kind of person you can hand an ambitious, poorly defined problem to, confident it will come back solved, documented, and better framed than it started. She doesn't need constant oversight; she needs context, and from there she moves forward with sound judgement and a consistent commitment to the quality of what she delivers.

Alongside this comes a remarkable capacity to learn in a field that evolves at pace. Marian got up to speed on emerging agentic-architecture technologies quickly and in depth, and translated that knowledge into concrete, workable solutions. She did so without ever losing sight of the team: she is an excellent colleague — generous in sharing what she knows, open to others' input, and with an attitude that raises the level of everyone around her.

I recommend Marian with complete confidence. Whoever hires her will gain a solid, dependable professional with tremendous room to grow. I am happy to provide any further detail on request.

Sincerely,

David Díez Cebollero
